

Amy Rohlfing, MD, was born at Red Bud Regional Hospital, the same hospital in which she now serves as main hospitalist, medical director of a 115-bed long term care facility and medical director of the Rural Health Clinic. Each setting requires a different medical approach and has different regulatory guidelines, but Dr. Rohlfing has dedicated countless hours to staying up-to-date. She quickly directs her teams to manage new surges and challenges.

Red Bud Regional Hospital is a 25-bed community hospital serving Randolph, Monroe and St. Clair counties in Southern Illinois, with a 115-bed skilled nursing facility.
