Leadership Series: How Hospitals and Health Systems Can Lead a Quiet Revolution for Healing | Aug 6

Date: August 06, 2020  Time: 12:00 PM

Location:
Webinar - noon to 1 pm

Registration:
“How Hospitals and Health Systems Can Lead a ‘Quiet Revolution’ for Healing During a Pandemic” is the fourth of six complimentary webinars in IHA’s virtual speaker series from June through September. You may register for individual session(s) or the entire series. Registration includes program material, one phone/Internet connection and access to the session recording(s).

The past, present and future meet as legal scholar Dayna Bowen Matthew, JD, PhD, boldly explores the historic and contemporary roles healthcare providers play in increasing health equity. She will shed light on the unique ways hospitals can address obstacles to health equity, specifically those heightened as a result of the COVID-19 pandemic.

See our flyer on the full speaker series.

WHO SHOULD ATTEND

This virtual speaker series is designed especially for hospital and health system leadership teams, including:

- CEOs
- CFOs
- COOs
- CMOs
- CNOs
- Chief human resource officers
- Chief strategy officers
- Chief quality officers
- Clinical leaders
- Department leaders

SPEAKERS
Dayna Bowen Matthew, JD, PhD, Dean, George Washington University Law School
A renowned legal scholar and public health expert, Matthew has more than 30 years of legal and academic experience, largely focusing on racial disparities. In addition to her role at George Washington University, she directs The Equity Center at the University of Virginia. Previously, Matthew was vice dean of the University of Colorado Law School. She was the 2015-2016 Robert Wood Johnson Foundation Health Policy Fellow.

©2020 Illinois Health and Hospital Association