‘Unacceptable’ cancer risks lead to stricter rules on ethylene oxide

After determining that cancer risks are "unacceptable," the federal government has taken an initial step to reduce the release of the gas ethylene oxide into the air. Chicago Sun-Times