Coronavirus may not be mutating, but experts say there is still potential for danger

So far, evidence does not show that the coronavirus is changing to become more severe or more transmittable, but complacency by people and local governments could increase its spread. CNN