The fight against widespread burnout in the health care workforce should begin with the training of future health care administrators. College of Public Health